One of the most haunted places that HPI (Halo Paranormal Investigations) investigated is Carrizo Plain National Monument aka "California's Serengeti," is a remote 250,000-acre grassland in San Luis Obispo County featuring spectacular spring wildflowers, the white salt flats of Soda Lake, and the active San Andreas Fault. It hosts endangered wildlife, ancient Chumash rock art at Painted Rock, and vast, untouched landscapes. And YES, this place is very haunted! But, besides ghosts we have the San Andreas Fault. The fault runs directly through the plain, creating visible ridges, ravines, and offset streams. After visiting the fault, you can stop by and see Soda Lake. Soda Lake is a massive, shimmering white alkali flat that is the largest remaining natural alkali wetland in Southern California.

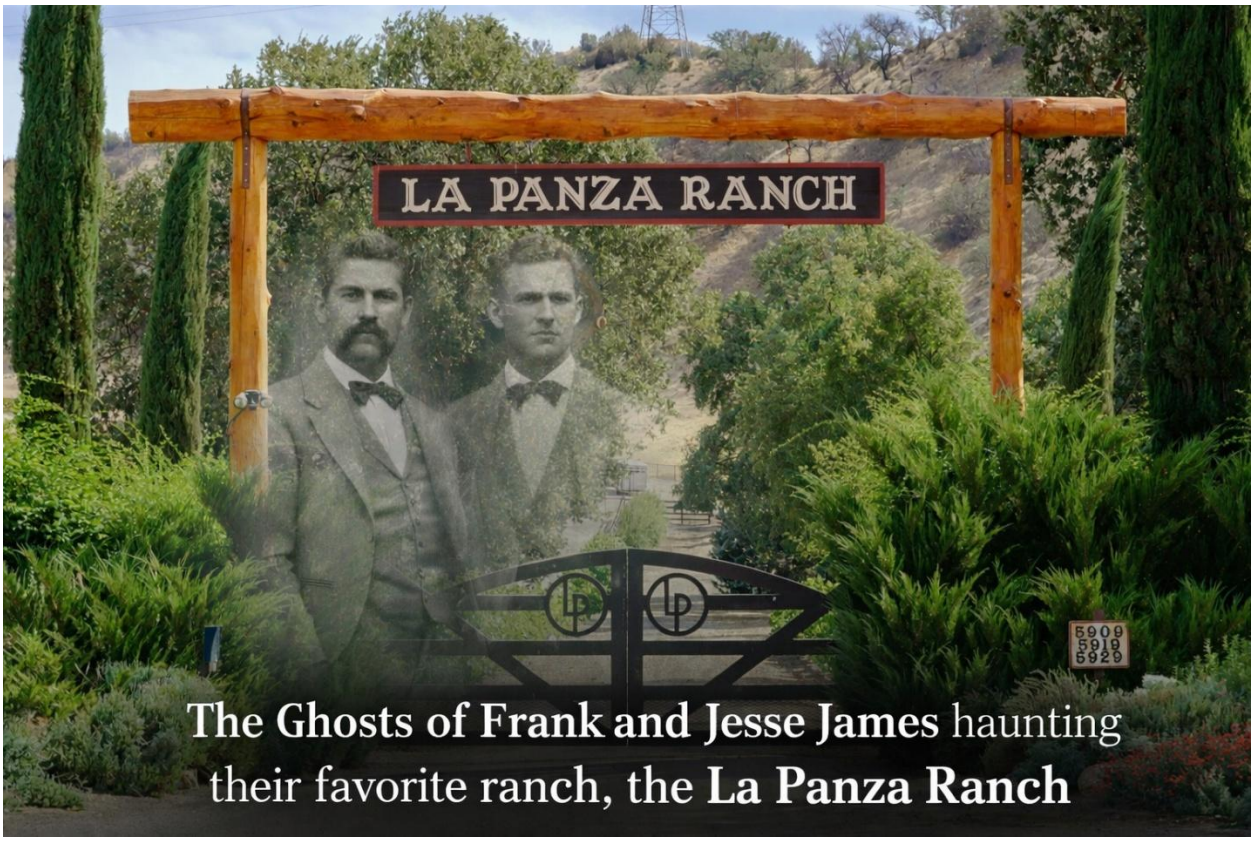
I brought 3 paranormal investigators with me and 2 paranormal investigators from MSC (Modesto Spectral Chasers). MSC actually recorded what sounded like distant drumming. MSC was at Painted Rock. Painted Rock is a huge, U-shaped rock formation featuring prehistoric, multicolored pictographs created by the Chumash people. MSC feels like they captured the spirits of the Chumash people. HPI and MSC visited Carrizo Plain during May, when we can see the W.S.B. aka Wildflower Super Blooms. In spring, with enough rain, the valley floor erupts into massive, colorful displays of wildflowers. We were fortunate to see this beautiful display of wildflowers. Carrizo Plain is a biodiversity hotspot. It holds the highest concentration of threatened and endangered wildlife in California, including the San Joaquin kit fox, giant kangaroo rat, and California condor. I am retired from the California Department of Fish and Wildlife, and I can personally tell you, that our Department kept a close eye on the Carrizo Plain. The Carrizo Plain is also known for its large open spaces, herds of pronghorn antelope, and tule elk. It is also a vital spot on the Pacific Flyway, especially in winter.



The Carrizo Plain National Monument is steeped in folklore involving outlaws, abandoned homesteads, and sacred indigenous sites. Travelers often describe the area's intense isolation as a place where you can "hear the silence," contributing to its eerie reputation. Some of the ghostly outlaws that are said to haunt the Carrizo Plain National Monument are the James Brothers. Local stories suggest that the spirits of outlaws Jesse and Frank James haunt the area. They briefly lived at the La Panza Ranch east of Pozo in 1868. Travelers have reported seeing shadowy horsemen and phantom figures near the old adobe ruins. Another ghostly outlaw seen at the Carrizo Plain is no other than Three Finger Jack. It is said that the Pinkerton Detectives were hot on the trail of Three Finger Jack while he was at the California Sierras and he took off to hide at the Carrizo Plain. He joined up with Joaquin Murrieta who just came back from Cantua Creek near Coalinga. Three Finger Jack and Joaquin Murrieta then met up with Black Bart aka Charles Boles when he left the Palace Hotel in Visalia. Some visitors and campers to this National Monument claim that they have seen some of these ghostly outlaws roaming around the areas that they are visiting or camping at. Michael Dunn a tourist from Bakersfield claims he saw a ghostly long haired Hispanic man on a horse. Michael says it reminded him of Zorro. An added note is that Joaquin Murrieta was the actual inspiration for Zorro. Some of the haunted places we visited were:

Mary Morris's Grave:
A lonely gravesite on a low hill marks the resting place of Mary Morris (1833–1896), a settler who lived in a dirt-floor cabin for her final years. The mystery surrounding her life and death has made the site a point of interest for those seeking the "ghosts" of the pioneer era. Loretta Scanton, a psychic says that Mary Morris definitely haunts her gravesite. HPI captured an EVP that was a female voice that said "see the elephant" or something that sounded like that sentence. The EVP was captured at Mary Morris's grave site.

Abandoned Homesteads:
The Van Matre homestead (active 1940–1970) features crumbling buildings and collapsing machinery. Visitors describe standing among these ruins and at times feel like they are in a time slip, as they feel like they are being transported into the time period that the homesteads were thriving. During our investigation, it was a hot day. It got up to 101 degrees. At the homestead, during this hot day, some of the investigators felt cold spots and there were spikes on our temperature gauges. We captured an EVP of a male voice saying "wake snakes". Lana Thompson of HPI felt ghostly hands on her arms during this investigation. With my peripheral vision, I saw a quick moving shadow at one of the collapsed buildings.

Painted Rock:
This U-shaped sandstone formation is a sacred site for the Chumash and Yokuts people, featuring pictographs thousands of years old. Many visitors report a profound, sometimes unsettling "power" or spiritual energy at the site. This site is where MSC recorded what sounded like "distant drumming".

UAP Sightings:
Kurt Lawson while visiting Carrizo Plain National Monument saw some lights zip past him. One of the lights sent down a light beam to the ground. This was near Elk Horn Valley. After a couple of minutes, the beam shut off and the lights zipped away. Kurt has no explanation for the lights. Kurt's sighting is recorded on the Internet with pictures.

Cryptid Sightings?
Some hikers claim that they have seen the Dark Watchers of the Santa Lucia Mountains at Carrizo Plain National Monument and Liam Robertson from Tulsa Oklahoma, while visiting Carrizo Plain, claims he encountered a Fresno Nightcrawler. No proof of these sightings are available. This information was received from our random interviews we did of people visiting this monument.

The paranormal reputation of Inunaki Village comes from a mixture of real crimes, abandoned locations, and internet urban legends. It's often described as one of Japan's most haunted or cursed places. Many Japanese citizens believe the village is real, but in reality, it's probably fictional. There is some foundation of truth to the stories. Let's look at the legend.

The Legend of Inunaki Village began in the 1990s with claims there is a hidden village deep in the mountains of Fukuoka Prefecture that does not recognize Japanese law. Some locals say there is at times a sign that is put up that reads: "The Japanese constitution is not in effect past here." A Japanese psychiatrist made the suggestion that the Inunaki Village legend may have been influenced by American horror movies. The movies they are referring to are Wrong Turn, The Hills Have Eyes, Deliverance, The Sawyer Family in Texas Chainsaw Massacre and the Firefly Family in House of 1000 Corpses. Movies that Americans refer to as hillbilly horror.

The Old Inunaki Village Inbreds
are looking for victims!
Terror at the Inunaki Tunnel in Japan

According to legend the secret village is inhabited by violent or inbred residents who attack outsiders. Many of these outsiders vanish without a trace. There is no verified evidence such a community exists today. A real historical village with the same name existed centuries ago but was dissolved long before the legend began. Let's look at a site that actually exists. That site is The Old Inunaki Tunnel. Most supernatural claims actually center on the nearby Old Inunaki Tunnel, which is real and now sealed off to the public. Japanese ghost hunting groups have reported the following:

Disembodied screams and voices
Shadow figures in the darkness
Sudden temperature drops
Cars stalling or electronics malfunctioning
Feelings of dread or being watched
Capturing EVPs outside of the tunnel
Strange blue orbs captured in photographs

Some legends say construction workers died building the tunnel and were buried inside the walls, because of this, there are restless spirits. The tunnel is considered by some to be among Japan's most haunted places. The reason why the tunnel is haunted according to Yuki Kobayashi, Paranormal Investigator is due to the fact there was a 1988 murder that fueled the hauntings. A factory worker was abducted, tortured, and burned alive inside the tunnel by a group of attackers. The tunnel was later sealed with concrete. This tragedy helped transform the area into a horror legend hotspot. Many ghost stories claim his spirit still haunts the tunnel. A woman ghosthunter claims she saw a full body apparition of the man that was murdered. The apparition was walking outside of the tunnel and there was blood dripping down from his head.

INUNAK

Then near the tunnel is the “Cursed Phone Booth”. Legend has it that there is a phone booth near a bridge. Supposedly the phone rings at 2:00 AM and a voice urges people to come toward the village. Some stories say answering the phone leads to a curse or spirits of drowning victims will appear. Answering the phone will cause a monstrous demon to appear. Some locals say if you answer the phone, ghostly villagers will chase visitors with tools or weapons. All the villagers look inbred. In the nearby forest, cell phones will lose signal when approaching the area. The villagers have set up human traps in the forest. People who enter the forest will get lost and not find their way out and vanish from society forever. The reason why so many people believe in this legend is because 1. A real abandoned tunnel is in this remote forest; 2. A documented murder happened at the tunnel; 3. Isolation and darkness creates a supernatural atmosphere; 4. Internet storytelling amplifies rumors. 5. Japanese folklore traditions involve vengeful spirits. Even journalists visiting the site have reported eerie sensations but no confirmed supernatural activity. Another horror film called Howling Village is semi-based on the Old Inunaki Tunnel and from there the legend grew.

HAUNTED BOLOGNA, ITALY

Bologna, Italy, holds several reputedly haunted locations rooted in dark legends and local folklore. Key spots include the abandoned Villa Clara (Villa Malvasia) associated with a ghost child, the eerie Palazzo Re Enzo, and the whispering walls of the Basilica di Santo Stefano, often visited on guided "ghost tours" exploring the city's darker side.

- Villa Clara (Villa Malvasia) (Via Zanardi 449): An abandoned villa known for the legend of a young girl named Clara who was walled up alive by her father in the early 20th century due to her clairvoyant powers. Passersby report hearing crying and piano music from within.

King Enzo of Sardinia chained to the castle wall.

- Palazzo Re Enzo: This 13th-century palace housed King Enzo of Sardinia, who was imprisoned there for 23 years until his death. The building is said to be haunted by his restless spirit.
- Basilica Santuario Santo Stefano: Known as the "Seven Churches," this complex has a long history of eerie occurrences, including whispers heard in the courtyards and the feeling of being watched.
- Villa Magnoni: Located in the surrounding region, this abandoned property is steeped in tales of a ghostly woman screaming from the windows, a legend that intensified after a car accident occurred near the abandoned site.
- Luigi Cattaneo Anatomical Wax Museum: While not technically a "haunted" building, this, along with the Anatomical Venus at Palazzo Poggi, is described as an intensely creepy location featuring incredibly realistic, disturbing 19th-century anatomical wax models.

These sites are often highlighted in local ghost tours that delve into Bologna's medieval mysteries and folklore.

Abandoned Villas

- Villa Clara (Villa Malvasia)

Perhaps the most famous haunted site in Bologna, this 16th-century villa in Trebbo di Reno is reportedly haunted by the spirit of a young girl named Clara. According to local legend, she was walled up alive by her father—either because she had clairvoyant powers that terrified him or because she fell in love with a servant. Visitors report hearing her crying or singing in the garden and seeing flickering lights in the windows.

- Villa Stregata (The Haunted House)

Located in Casalecchio di Reno, this villa's name literally translates to "Haunted House". Local myths suggest it was once a coven for witches or the site of a tragic family murder. While urban explorers often find signs of squatters, many locals still avoid looking directly at the house for fear of welcoming spirits.

- Villa Ghigi

This uninhabited villa sits on the outskirts of the city within a popular hiking park. While some consider it haunting due to its state of decay, it is primarily known today for the natural beauty of the surrounding Villa Ghigi Park.

BELOW IS A BLAST FROM THE PAST!

Subject: A Dimensional Rift for Ghosts, UFOs, Shadow People, Little People and Bigfoot Sat Jan 26, 2008 2:27 pm QUOTE

Today is December 15, 2007, Saturday. I am meeting a group of paranormal investigators/ufologists/cryptozoologists/scouts/occult pioneers at Starbucks on 15th and Broadway in Sacramento and more investigators at Paradise Juice and Coffee Bar in Willits. This group by name are: Michele Stump, Robin Kanstein, Bryan Coleman, Angel Kesti, Donna Reynolds, Holly DeLaughter, Chris Grissom, Nicole Pollard-Wilburn and of course me, I am the lead investigator and scoutmaster of this scouting mission to Covelo. Holly and Nicole are our guides, since they have lived in Covelo for quite sometime and know the ins and outs of this town.

Holly and Nicole are the first ones that told me about haunted Covelo and Michelle Stump, Researcher came up with this information, these are her words from an email:

"I did some research on the Round Valley Wars, Mendocino County investigation. I believe that this place could definitely be haunted. It has a very bloody history.

Then I received this email from Holly DeLaughter:

"The small, lonely but luscious town of Covelo is situated in Northeastern Mendocino County and is one of the most beautiful places in California. It is also one of the most heavily imprinted and is considered haunted due to its very sad, tragic history. Also known as the Nome Cult Farm, Round Valley Indian Reservation and Camp Wright, the valley and its surrounding mountains, lakes, rivers and streams were traditional homelands of the Yuki, Wailaki, Huchnom, Lassik, and other Indian tribes dating back to the late B.C. period. It was in the early to mid 1800's, Anglo-American settlers and the United States Government came marching in. The results were some of the most horrific in the State of California's history.

Link to history can be found here: http://www.covelo.net/tribes/pages/tribes_history.shtml
Forced relocation of California's Indians/Nome Cult Walk (were marched here!): http://www.covelo.net/tribes/pages/nomecult/tribes_nome_cult_history.shtml"

I first came to the valley in 1997 to visit my parents after they relocated to Covelo from Sacramento. My dad took a job as a school teacher at the local charter school. I cannot describe to you the utter pain and sorrow I felt from the land upon arrival, despite its optic brilliance. Being so empathic I found it virtually impossible to tread lightly, as there was so much heaviness everywhere. I owe much of my spiritual enlightenment to the truth of this land and would like to invite you to come adventure with me. Come scout it out! Bigfoot lives here and is referred to as the Wild Man of the Woods. I have seen this species myself and have a report on file with the BFRO, along with many others (google Covelo and Bigfoot). There are also what the elders refer to as Little People who roam the hills and hollows at night. Then there is also Shadow people. There are UFO sightings galore! There's not a single inch of this valley that's not anciently occupied with spirits leading the way. I have lost time on Hwy 162 with a witness in my car, slipped into another dimension where everything was surreal and buzzing (Paul: This sounds like Holly is referring to the Oz Factor, which abductees feel the same thing Holly is feeling). No, I wasn't stoned! I channeled a Navaho spirit, followed another to a remote location where I captured an apparition with my camera, and on it goes..

There's all kinds of paranormal phenomena in these Northern California wilds.. Cool thing is, what much of the world calls paranormal is really pretty normal here! After a decade of comings and goings… I myself have come to the conclusion this land ties into the Vortex of Shasta, expanding on (sharing) Her Majesty's powerful energy grid, heartily seasoned by its own unique energy, of course. For those who care to venture, you're in for a real treat! Bring lots of equipment and please dress warm.

Pertinent highly recommended reading material (unfortunately out of print but obtainable for a steep price online): Genocide and Vendetta: The Round Valley Wars of Northern California by Lynwood Carranco and Estle Beard. Very good book!"

This is what I know. In 1854 European settlers entered this valley. Legend has it, that when the Yuki

Indians saw the first white man, they gathered around his horse, happy to greet this new stranger. The stranger pointed a stick at one of the Indians and the Indian fell dead. The Indians then associated the white man as being a devil. The first governor of California allowed genocide to take place against the Indians and over 5,000 Indians died. When finally a proclamation law came into effect, protecting the Indians, the Indians (men, women and children) became slaves for the white man. So many Indians died, that a creek called Bloody Run Creek actually ran red with Indian blood. The Round Valley Wars was a slaughterhouse of Indians being massacred in these open fields. It is rumored that strong residual haunting activity still takes places on these open killing fields.

As my team of investigators arrived at Paradise Juice and Coffee Bar in Willits to meet our guides Holly and Nicole, everyone was overjoyed to see Holly and Nicole again. Some of the investigators worked with Holly and Nicole on the Mount Shasta scouting mission. It was a nice reunion! Nicole made sure I had a green wheat shot, that tasted like grass and would give me an energy boost! Holly & Nicole gives a briefing to our HPI Covelo task force and tells us what to expect. We all convoy to Covelo and follow Holly up the steep winding roads. On this day we are paranormal pioneer investigators, because this is the first time a paranormal investigating group has officially investigated Covelo. Shannon 'Ms. Macabre' stays in constant communication with Chris and I, on the development of this mission. With any new findings, I kept Shannon, our president fully informed. I did a count on our equipment for this mission. We had 2 walkie talkies, 5 digital cameras, 1 video camera, 4 audio digital recorders, 4 Listen Up Sound Enhancers, 3 EMF Readers, 3 pen laser lights, 1 temperature gauge, 4 flashlights, plastic analysis bags (for Bigfoot evidence), 3 dowsing rods, 3 pendulums, 1 set of binoculars, 1 telephoto lens, 9 cellular phones. Bryan Coleman which will be working with Shannon on a possible documentary was there to video tape this event. Bryan drove all the way up here from Santa Cruz, I enjoyed watching his professionalism as he handled his video camera and interviewed some of the main players of this scouting expedition.

First Stop/Makeshift Grave of Mason Riley: Our first stop was at a makeshift grave on the side of the road honoring Mason Riley, in which a truck he was a passenger in went over a cliff. Holly and Nicole were very close to the family of this tragedy. We paid our tributes to Mason and his family.

Second Stop/Whiteman's Cemetery: Angie 'Auj' Joaquin, a native American Indian and our guide through this cemetery briefed us on how her family has lived in this valley for 70 years. She explained how 7 tribes were driven from their lands from Ukiah and the Sacramento Valley to Covelo. She discussed Bloody Run Trail and how Indians were forced into boarding schools. She tells us how she lost many of her family members due to the conflict with the white settlers of this region. She explains because of all the tragedy, there is a lot of residual haunting activity here. Then there is Hatchet Mountain. Nicole says: "Hatchet Mountain has no actual hatchet buried up there, Its part of a Native burial ground, and the way that the snow never holds over it, its in the shape of a hatchet that occupies the entire front side of the mountain! So when it snows it outlines the grounds to expose the enormous hatchet." Angie tells us she has Wylaiki and Nomalaki blood in her. Her story is very sad and we listened to the many tragic tales of this land and its inhabitants. Bryan captures her briefing on video.

Third Stop/Pine Grove Indian Cemetery: Many of Angie's family members are buried here. She talks of the Nomalaki Indians and she discusses some of the paranormal activity of this land. She says that a black goblin has been seen, that has claws and a tail. She says that this goblin looks almost like a gargoyle with broken wings. A dead goblin was once found by the Indians and its disappearance after being found is a mystery, it was rumored that the Indians of this land burned it. What is interesting Whitley Streiber in his book 'Communion' describes a goblin type of creature that works alongside the 'grays'. The goblin type of creature that Whitley describes is dark blue, with no wings. The goblin is short and has the face of a gargoyle, almost similar to what Angie is describing. Angie says that the goblin that has been seen here has glass-like skin as dark as coal and a big nose. Auj said the one that was found dead was wrapped in a yellow shaw type thing. The one that she has seen entering homes has never been seen wearing any article of clothing. Another entity that is seen here is a shadow woman that has holes for her eyes, mouth and nose, she wears a white dress. At times people hear distant warpath drums beating and a woman crying.

Fourth Stop/North Fork Lounge: We all stop to eat, we are starved! I gobble down some spaghetti and listen to the stories of two guests at our table named Sherry D. Moore and Linda Lohne. Both ladies have some interesting stories. They talk about Irmulco - Redwood Creek - Flat Meadow where Sherry witnessed hundreds of different colored lights in the open fields. The lights danced in the field and it reminded her of fairies or leprechauns. She talks about a huge UFO that was seen in this area, the size of a football field and it was oval in shape. She says that there were lights on the top of it. She once has a whirling rainbow portal that opened up near her bedroom, she talks about the Bigfoot sightings in this area. Linda Lohne talks about her little boy that had an invisible playmate named Georgie and the strange occurrences that would happen when Georgie was around. Sherry and Linda hang out with us after dinner and watch us proceed to investigate other places in Covelo. Nicole had me laughing, she calls all men and women 'dude' and she has a cute saying, when she is ready to go to another location, she will say..."let's mob over to that house!" Mob means 'to go'. Before I knew it she has me saying mob this and mob that.

Fifth Stop/Bigfoot Sighting Location: This is where Holly witnessed a Bigfoot, the report went to the B.F.R.O. and the case file was created for this sighting by Holly. Holly explains in detail about her encounter to the HPI team. I attempt to communicate with Bigfoot by pounding a branch against a tree three times. Bigfoot is known to communicate by hitting wood on wood. I would hit the tree three times and waited for a response. At one time, I heard one hit upon a tree. I attempted this communication again and looked for intelligent responses. If I hit the tree 3 times with a branch, the Bigfoot should respond with 3 hits to a tree. Then I would go down to two and wait for 2 responses and so on and so on. With only one hit to the tree, this form of communication was inconclusive. Bryan and I, did hear 3 pebbles falling into the creek. This could have been an animal knocking over rocks into the creek, there were no more sounds of pebbles, which continued to make this attempt with communicating with Bigfoot inconclusive. Robin claimed that when I was hitting the trees, a tapping on the car was heard as she sat in the car. Angel and I looked for any evidence of her car being touched and we could find no evidence of this.

Sixth Stop/Buckhorn Bar: Also known as 'knuckie buckie' because of the fights that would occur in this bar and also known as -uckhorn Bar, changing the first letter into another letter that gives the bar a new light into seediness and raunchiness. Allan Bar from Central Africa/South Africa is the owner of this bar and he tells me that this bar was at one time the most dangerous bar in Mendocino County, he now has all kinds of security cameras placed around the bar. He let me survey the security cameras and this is what I found. Cam 1: Orb movement. Cam 2: No paranormal activity. Cam 4: Has orb movement, one orb made a 90 degree turn, which could indicate intelligence. Cam 7: 2 large non-moving orbs that stay stationary and they recently appeared and there is no explanation why they are there. As we were going to continue our investigation pass closing time, Allan told us we have to leave, because there were local police parked outside of his establishment. For a small town, there are many local police cars and tribal police around this area. In fact Holly's office is right on top of the local police station, talk about feeling safe at her office!

Seventh Stop/Rice Straw Home of Monelle Riley. This home is reputed to be haunted. I cannot give you the details for the confidentiality request of the occupant. I love this home, it's made of rice straw! Also, outside of this home are real Indian tee pees! I actually went inside one of the tee pees. Orb photographs were captured at this location. EVPs were not gathered due to audio interference, there was a birthday party going on at this home during our investigation. There were too many people around to gather EVP evidence. Holly captures white mist on the roof, I had Holly try and duplicate the shot, but she was unable to. We were later able to determine that the white mist was the cold breath of Holly captured on film. This photograph was debunked by the team.

Eighth Stop/Holly's Photography Office: Her office is reputed to be haunted. She believes this is in part residual due to the history of the land but has also seen the full body apparition of a local who recently passed and used to work in the same building. Lights turn on and off on their own accord and this was witnessed by part of the HPI crew on Saturday night and more so Sunday. I sent Michele Stump and Nicole Pollard-Wilburn on a survellaince/reconnaissance mission to survey the open fields at night, because it is rumored that shadow people are seen in these fields. Michele sees 2 large figured shadow people on the balcony and it frightened her so much, she was practically sitting on Nicole's lap. Nicole glimpsed the shadow people from her peripheral vision. Michele also saw small shadow people figures running across the field. Later, Chris and I conducted surveillance on these open fields and we did not see any shadow people. I was glad, I didn't feel like jumping on Chris' lap, nor did he want to jump on my lap! The night before Jenna DeLaughter (Holly's daughter) was confronted by a shadow person between her home and that of a friend‘s house. The two friends live a block apart and decided to meet half way. When Jenna rounded the corner she saw the shadow of what she assumed to be her friend and said, “Hey”

The shadow then crouched to the ground with no response. Jenna thinking it was her girlfriend playing a joke laughed and said, "You know I see you, don‘t you? What the *ell are you doing?!" Before her very eyes, the shadow person disappeared and the real version of her friend appeared coming out of her driveway, not even close to the location of Jenna's sighting of the shadow person. Jenna is frightened from this experience and tells her mother about it. Bridgett reports to Jenna she felt like she was being followed and also that she felt she was walking forever and not getting any where. Chris, Angel and I, attempt to signal UFOs using flashlights and pen laser lights used against the night skies. Unfortunately there was cloud cover and the signaling was terminated. Chris and I, did notice that the pen laser light travels a great distance, because we could see the red dot move on the outside of the cloud. The rest of the investigation was for ghostly activity in Holly's office. After the investigation, Holly briefs us that several years ago cattle mutilations were occurring in this valley. The cattle mutilations have now resided. Cattle mutilations are associated with black helicopters and UFOs. Finally after the investigation was finished, we enjoyed two horror movies. Dead Silence and the true story of the Bell Witch, called An American Haunting. We had a slumber party for the whole investigation group right in Holly's haunted photography office, this was a very enjoyable investigation in which some of the investigators had experiences that may be considered paranormal, while other investigators did not.

Before I close, during the slumber party at Holly's office, there was snore wars! I will not disclose the snorers, but two of the snorers were snoring in harmony, which made everyone in the room wake up and there was bellowing laughter by everyone! Ahhh...snore wars is a fun game! With all of that snoring, it must have scared off any ghosts from Holly's office!

Added Note: Chris and I headed back to Sacramento, while some of the investigators continued to conduct their investigation into Sunday. This Sunday investigation report will be completed by paranormal investigator Donna Reynolds.
